FASTENERS FOR SEISMIC BRACING

WHAT ARE YOU REQUIRED BY CODE TO BRACE?

Title 24

Section 1613A "Lateral Force on Elements of Structures, Nonstructural Components and Equipment Supported by Structures" "Elements of structures and their attachments, permanent nonstructural components and their attachments, and the attachments for permanent equipment supported by a structure shall be designed to resist the total design seismic forces prescribed in Section 1632.A.2. Attachments shall include anchorages and required bracing."

Non-Structural Items Requiring Proper Bracing (partial list):

1. Movable items (storage racks, etc.) that are 5 feet and taller must be seismically braced. Anything less than 5 feet in height must be braced if the supporting base is less than two-thirds of the overall height of the unit. All such items shall be restrained to prevent movement when not in use.
2. Permanent floor-supported items (cabinets, bookcases, etc.) that are more than 6 feet in height (including contents).
3. All equipment greater than 400 lbs, and greater than 4 feet in height need to be properly braced for lateral loads. (ASCE 7-05 Section 13.1.4)
4. Temporary containers with flammable or hazardous materials.
5. Vessels, including tanks and pressurized spheres on braced or un-braced legs.
6. Bins or hoppers on braced or un-braced legs.
7. Batteries on racks shall be restrained against movement in all directions due to earthquake forces.
8. All other self-supporting structures not otherwise covered.

Creating a Secure Environment

When an earthquake strikes, the primary cause of injury or death is from unsecured heavy objects toppling over. The first step in earthquake preparedness is to secure top heavy items such as furniture, storage cabinets, data cabinets, expensive equipment and items that if damaged would cause operations to cease. Hospitals, universities, laboratories, offices, and warehouses each have special needs for earthquake bracing. This product assortment offers fasteners designed to meet and exceed all of those needs.
